The revolutionary perspective of Trotskyism

13 March 2010

The International Students for Social Equality (ISSE) invites students to attend a lecture at RMIT and the University of Melbourne on the revolutionary political and historical perspective of Trotskyism, represented by the International Committee of the Fourth International (ICFI), and its struggle for the political independence of the working class. The lecture will reveal the fundamental class divide that exists between the ICFI and the various middle class "ex-left" protest organisations, including Socialist Alternative.

The lecture will be delivered by Socialist Equality Party national organiser James Cogan. All students are welcome to attend.
