

New pamphlet on police killings from Mehring Books

Shannon Jones
31 January 2015

Mehring Books is pleased to announce the publication of a new pamphlet, The War Comes Home: Race, Class and Police Violence in America. The pamphlet contains a series of articles that examine the connection between the growth of police violence and the erection of a police military intelligence apparatus that operates without legal or constitutional constraints.

The pamphlet also examines the relation between the destruction of democratic rights and the growth of social inequality and between police violence at home and war overseas. It looks at the role of the Obama administration in bolstering the reign of terror by the American elites and the function of proponents of identity politics such as Democratic Party operative Al Sharpton.
